Short thought

The Nightingale

Sir, - I have not noticed in your columns, or elsewhere, notification, common at this time of year, of the return of the nightingale. Punctually at break of day I have for fully a week heard this bird singing in a garden overlooking the Channel, situate in a locality which, lest I should convey information useful to the enemy, I will distantly allude to as "somewhere on the South coast." The melodious notes always have a plaintive undertone. Just now, probably subtly influenced by the carnage going on day and night across the water, I find in them a distinctly deeper sadness.

Yours Faithfully

Henry Lucy, 1 May 1917

Please send any notices for the pew sheet each week by Wednesday evening via email to Mthr Amy-Elizabeth.
