Short thought

The Trinity is arguably the most difficult thing for people to understand and I have heard many attempts at explaining this. If we could understand everything about God, that would make us as wise as Him – and I doubt that that will ever happen! However, let me share with you something I shared with the people at Oakdene last year.

Ice, steam and water are all different and we use them for different things, but basically, they are all made up of exactly the same thing. In different situations, they take on a different appearance. Father, Son and Holy Spirit may have different forms and can be seen as having different roles, Father Creator, Son, teacher and redeemer, Spirit comforter and helper; but in essence they are exactly the same and they come to us in whatever form meets our needs.

May our Trinitarian God bless you all Lyn
